

ITALIAN RESERVISTS IN ALBERTA ARE OFFICIALLY CALLED

Consul Felice de Angelis Receives Instructions From Montreal

Felice de Angelis, the Italian consul for Alberta, has received instructions from the consul-general in Montreal relative to the calling of the Italian reservists for immediate service at the front.

All reservists in Canada from class 1876 to 1895 are instructed to report to Mr. de Angelis' office in the Bellamy block, Edmonton. They are to hold themselves in readiness to start at a moment's notice. All reservists from any point in Alberta will be advanced by the government. Any men who have deserted from the army, or any who may have evaded service, are to be granted a free pardon, if they promptly present themselves to the consul.

The Italian government also announces that all postponement of military service which may have been granted for any purpose whatever has been withdrawn and these are expected to report forthwith and repair to Italy to undergo their training. Mr. de Angelis states that there are about 500 of his fellow countrymen who will come under these instructions.

HINTS FOR TRAVELLERS

Some Etiquette For Sleeping Car
Patrons by an Old Traveller

Many years' experience of the petty annoyances caused by the minority composed of thoughtless, as well as selfish, persons travelling in sleeping cars caused in old travelling man to write to a Montreal newspaper the following suggestions for men travelling in sleeping cars:

The necessarily small space in a sleeping car in comparison with an hotel suggests that the greatest comfort to the sleeping car traveller will result from a fair regard for the rights and feelings of others by all sleeping car travellers.

So long as passengers desire to have their clothes brushed with a whisk, the space in the passage-way at either end of the car is the only proper place for this practice to occur. The sleeping car company's instructions to the porters require them to ask passengers to go to the aisle at the end of the car if desiring to be brushed.

The combined lavatory and smoking room is necessarily limited in capacity, and at the time in the morning when it has to be used as a lavatory it is not intended to be used at all as a smoking room.

Don't smoke in this room in the early morning when the other later risers than you are obliged to perform their toilets. You can defer your smoke.

Don't bring in your suit-case to this room. Use a toilet "hold-all." Many men do. You can. Give the other fellows a chance of some room. Don't whisk your clothes in this room if other persons are present. They don't want to breathe your dust. Don't get up late and shave, if by so doing you discommode others.

The instant you have finished your toilet, get out of the room. Don't stay in this room and crowd the late risers.

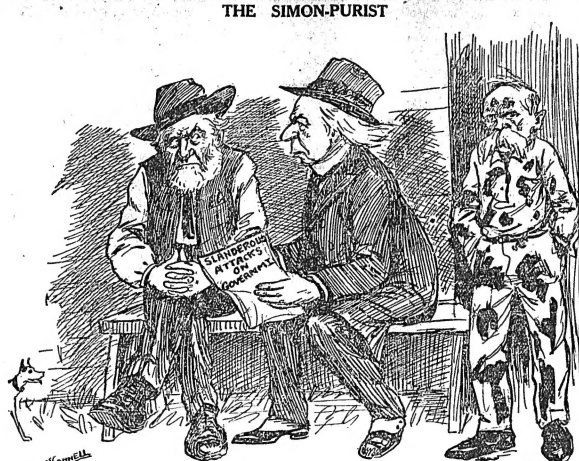

Don't whistle anywhere in a sleeping car.

Don't talk loudly in the body of the car when most people have retired to sleep.

FLOWERS AND WEEDS

Uncontrolled Flowers May Often Be come Bad Weeds

The propagation of weeds has at times been encouraged under the guise of a beautiful flower, instances of this are not rare in Canada, and among those may be mentioned that of the Kochia, or Burning Bush. This is an ornamental annual, of rapid growth, developing into a pyramid from two to three feet high. The leaves are slender and of light green color, changing in September to a deep red. The flowers are small but innumerable, and the seed proportionately plentiful.

The plant, if allowed to ripen, drops its seed very readily, and, wherever a seed drops, a plant will grow the following season. It has been largely used as a border plant along roadways and drives, and is sold by the seedsmen for this purpose. On account of its rapid spreading, the planing of Kochia should be discontinued.

Thoughts of a Fool?

Why don't the Methodist and Presbyterian churches amalgamate during the war? I understand that they both are in bad shape financially, and to this fact it appears that conditions will not improve while the war lasts, rather the other way.

Then Dr. Wilson will be going with the troops, and both congregations could sit under the ministry of Mr. Brown in the Methodist Church, which is amply large enough to accommodate them. What a chance for both congregations to overcome some small dislikes and exercise Christian unity, and at the same time economize on expenses during these war times.

Then, about the 1st of July this year. Instead of spending a lot of money for prizes, fireworks, etc., and soliciting the merchants for subscriptions which they ought to sooner give to the Red Cross work, why not go in for a monster picnic? A real old timer, everybody bring baskets, both country folk and town folk. Have baseball, football, foot races, and so on, for the good of it, without the prizes.

"Universal Service Corps"—that's what we should all belong to, lots better than conscription; and if every able-bodied man belonged to some militia organization, or, at least, had some military training, would it help win the war? Sure. What a moral effect it would have on the Germans if they knew that every able-bodied Britisher was training to fight or making ammunition. Eh, what!

Well, a fool, will have his thoughts but wise men see different; but the biggest fool is the fool who thinks he's a wise man.

Brooksley News

Bidborough Court Hospital,
Tunbridge Wells.

Extracts of letter from Sergt. F. W. Ritson, Fifth Battalion:

This is a lovely place and the nurses are splendid. It is a great change to be clean after our time in France. I had no sleep or rations for six days. Another sergeant and myself lived for one day on a pound tin of marmalade. I was buried up in a trench by a Jack Johnson, but got out alright. Mr. Page was the only officer left in our company. Major Pragnell was hit in five places but refused to go to hospital until he dropped. Poor old Sandeman was badly hit, and neither Robin nor I can get any trace of him; he is not at the hospital with the other officers.

The first place we went to when we got to France was Arras, then we went to Fleisbeek, where we held the line for more than two weeks. Then we left Sir Douglas Haig's army and went to Smith-Dorrien's. I saw most of the leading generals—the two I mentioned and Generals French, Alderson and Plumer.

I think the positions are safe. The Ypres horseshoe is the worst. That is where the Canadians lost so many. The Canadians certainly were fine, and I am really proud now that I belong to them. Every British Tommy is of the opinion that as soon as French says the word we will wade in and smash the Germans. Their artillery is good, but not as good as ours, and their infantry inferior.

The gas is horrible, and the worst sights of all were the poor beggars dying by the roadside, without a scratch on them. They all begged for water, but we found it was like poison to them, and all we could do was to tickle their throats to make them vomit. If they did that they had a fair chance to live.

The wonder to me is that after such a bombardment as we had that a single one of us was left alive. One shell burst close to me and of five of us who dropped only two got up. I was so near to some of their high explosive shells that I was lifted up in the air. Shorne, from Ait, was hit under the arm. I saw Scott as I was helped away and he was alright, so was Jack Muir. The 5th battalion lost about 350 men.

When I was lying in a bed in the dressing station I was talking to a man and found that he used to work for Iskip. Just then a shell came and took the roof off and we had to get out. It was pitiful to see the badly wounded trying to get into safety. There were a lot of Hindus, and they were cursing and calling Sahib, Sahib. I had all I could do to get away with only one foot. I was taken in an ambulance and as we went through Ypres they were shouting it. One big shell hit the Cloth Hall just as we passed. I saw in a horse ambulance to Flanders, then in a motor from there to Hazebrouk. There we got the train to Boulogne. I stayed there one night and came over on the hospital ship St. Andrew to Dover. There was an ambulance waiting on the dock to bring us to Tunbridge, and then we were put into a car and brought here.

INSPIRING WORDS OF GEN. ALDERSON

Tells Canadian Cavalry That God Takes to Himself Men Who Die For Country

London, June 8th, (C.A.P.)—General Alderson visited the first Canadian cavalry on its return to billets from the trenches on May 28th and addressed the brigade in the following terms:

"I have come to congratulate and thank you most sincerely for the work you have just done. On your arrival in France you dismounted yourselves, left your horses behind and came out here to help us where we of the Canadian division were short of men. And you have helped us most splendidly. I know you had a very trying time in the trenches. They were not very good, and you had to undergo a great deal of very heavy shelling. In spite of that you carried out your allotted task uncommonly well.

"Before we go any further let us pause and give thought to those brave comrades of ours who have gone. My faith in the Almighty is such that I am perfectly sure that He takes to Himself and looks after men like they, whatever past lives may have been, who did their duty nobly, have been fighting for their country and Empire. Let us leave them at that. We could not leave them better."

Death of Old Settler

The death occurred suddenly, Sunday, May 30th, of Arthur Bruce Dodge, aged 82 years, at his home near Ardley. Mr. Dodge was one of the earliest settlers of this district, coming here from North Dakota thirteen years ago, and during which time he has endeared himself to the people by his kindness and genial disposition. He will be sadly missed by his neighbors, and by the young people of the community with whom he always mingled in their social pursuits. His kindly face will be missed by many at the summer outings, where he was always a prominent figure and happy among the children. Service, which was largely attended, was held at the Church of Christ, Ardley, by Elder Robt. Simpson, a friend of the deceased, after which the remains were sent east to be laid away in the family plot at Walnut, Ill.

The Methodist conference of Saskatchewan pledges itself to develop stronger sentiment favoring temperance, and unanimously endorses legislation of Saskatchewan Government. The conference will work to the end that enforcement of new law shall not fail through lack of popular support.

Edmonton's annual census gives that city a population of 59,339, a decrease from last year of about 13,117 souls. The papers there contend this decrease is almost wholly made up when enlistments for the war are counted, as the troops sent from that city have not been counted in the summing up, and the Journal contends Edmonton has sent more soldiers to the front than any city in Canada.

CROP CONDITIONS

VERY FAVORABLE.

Reports summing up crop conditions throughout Western Canada agree that the general situation was never better. Seeding was completed in time, and the seed was sown in the ground when heavy rains fell, and crops are uniformly a week to ten days ahead of average seasons. Reports from all parts agree that farmers have done their work better than any previous year and a higher class of husbandry is in evidence throughout the country. Pasture is in splendid condition, and all kinds of live stock are doing well. The President of the United Farmers of Alberta, in summing up crop conditions, after personal observation during a trip through Southern Alberta, and reports from other sections of the province, says, "During a residence of 24 years in this province, I have never seen crop prospects better than they are at present. Indeed, I would say, that I have never seen them so good."

ALBERTA'S GREAT AREA.

Some idea of the great productive area of Alberta is gained from the fact that a few days ago a settler came into Edmonton from Fort Vermilion and reported that he had 250 acres under crop there this year. Fort Vermilion is farther from the southern boundary of Alberta than St. Paul is from St. Louis. It is as far north of Lethbridge, Alberta, as Great Falls, Montana, is north of Salt Lake City, Utah. The settler mentioned has lived for 29 years at Fort Vermilion, and declares that in all that time there has never been a total failure of either wheat, oats or barley. His long and successful experience enables him to speak with authority as to climatic and crop conditions. Wheat has been the most important crop during the twenty-nine years, as there was a better market for wheat in the form of flour than for oats or barley, although both the latter grow as well as wheat. A small steam grist mill was taken to Vermilion in 1886 and more ten years later another small grist mill was taken in. Later still the Hudson's Bay Company established a fifty-barrel roller process mill, so that wheat has been ground into floor for commercial purposes at Fort Vermilion for twenty-nine years.

The fact that these grain crops are successfully grown hundreds of miles north of Central and Southern Alberta, where the fertile farm lands of the Canadian Pacific Railway are located, should satisfy any doubter who supposes that Alberta or Saskatchewan are too far north for the practice of the most profitable lines of agriculture. These two provinces have an area of over half a million square miles, and with grain now being grown successfully almost at their northern boundary the area suitable for farming is very great indeed. At the same time it should be remembered that the districts that are well served with railway, telephone, and other modern accommodations, are being rapidly settled up, and the intending homemaker has everything to gain by prompt action in selecting his land.

GOPHER EXTERMINATION

Results of Investigation in North Dakota

A gopher investigation has been carried on by the North Dakota Experiment Station and the U.S. Bureau Biological Survey. The object of the investigation was to find the best method of eradicating the gophers that have been causing so much damage to crops in parts of the state. Different methods have been used, but no permanent results have been secured. Nearly $50,000 has been paid out in bounties during the last 12 years by counties. Farmers have also spent considerable sums in buying proprietary poisons. The damage caused by gophers is estimated at least $1,000,000 per year, and this is likely more than doubled in a dry season. Oats were found to be the best grain to use, and strychnine the best poison. The poison is made up into a paste which is coated on the oats. In this way, as soon as the gopher gets the grain in his pouch, he begins to act, and it has been found that it takes but one-fifth as much poison to kill them in this way as it does after they eat it. It was found that the cost of the treatment would run from two to four cents per acre, and that the holes could be found readily. The ground squirrels took the poison freely even when their cheek pouches were already filled with new wheat, flax, barley, alfalfa, huds, or other green food. Ten grains of oats poisoned in this way and placed in the cheek pouches were found sufficient to kill squirrels three-fourths grown. The larger the quantity of poison taken, however, the more quickly they died. Many of the ground squirrels are killed outside their holes, but as strychnine acts by causing a series of convulsions with intervening periods of rest, they frequently run into their holes between the convulsions and die there.

FIELD EXTERMINATION TESTS. Tests were made on a large scale to determine the cost per acre of complete extermination on heavily infested fields. The two following records are typical cases. A field of 100 acres was treated, 963 ground squirrel holes being poisoned. 15, quarts of strychnine-coated grain were used which cost 63 cents. It required 8 hours for one man to distribute this poison, which, at 15 cents per hour, would cost $1.20. This makes a total cost of $1.83 for treating 100 acres, or less than 2 cents per acre. Another field of 60 acres was treated on which 600 ground squirrel holes were poisoned. 8 quarts of strychnine-coated grain were used, which cost 63 cents. Labor of one man for four hours distributing the poison at 15 cents per hour would cost 60 cents. The total cost, including poisoned grain and labor for treating 60 acres, was 90 cents, which is less than 3 cents per acre. Careful inspection of both of these fields for 10 days after treating failed to show a single living ground squirrel or any sign of their work, though they were abundant in both fields previous to poisoning. The average cost per acre for 135 acres was slightly over 21 cents. Including the poisoned grain and labor for distributing the same, the cost varied from approximately 2 to 4 cents per acre, according to the abundance of squirrel holes. One man can cover from 75 to 100 acres in 8 hours work. It is thus evident that the cost of exterminating these pests is much less than the loss caused by them during a single year.

Bishop of London Says Choice of War Was Righteous

London, June 10.—"God always has to let His people choose the gospel of the second best, and I believe with all my soul, I, bishop of the church of God, that the right choice was which we chose in August, was according to the will of God, rather than an unrighteous peace. This was the striking sentence in an address delivered last evening in St. Paul's cathedral by the Bishop of London to three thousand members of the city of London national guard.

"War," said the bishop, "was as ideally inconsistent with Christianity as slavery was, but even God could only get out of the morality of which it was capable. God could only educate the world gradually. The Christian church had in itself all the principles which make slavery impossible. But it took 1800 years to abolish it. It has all the principles that make war impossible, but it will take another 1800 years to abolish war, and meanwhile God has to let His people choose the gospel of the second best.

"When I think of what Christ died for on Good Friday," continued the bishop, "I was very much like what our boys are dying for out there in Flanders. Christ died for freedom, honor, purity and love. Our boys out there are dying for the same cause as truly as St. Stephen was martyred, who fell after his Captain, God, loved freedom, honor and purity, then I say the contest we are fighting today is on the side of God, and will become God's holy war."

Russians Force Germans Back

London, June 10.—A German tactical reverse in the Baltic provinces of Russia is indicated by the official statement today from Berlin. It is said the Russian brought up reinforcements in the Baltic provinces of Shavli, and that the wing of the German forces which had been at the mouth of the Dvina river was withdrawn.

German Forces Retreat

Berlin, June 10.—The official announcement from army headquarters today states that the German forces which invaded the Baltic provinces of Russia have retreated. The statement says that the German wing withdrawn to the south towards the Belzoga Zogine line.

Full Text of U.S. Note to Berlin on Lusitania

Washington, June 11.—The text of the American rejoinder to the German government's reply to the note following the sinking of the Lusitania follows:

"American ambassador to Berlin: You are instructed to deliver to the following note to the minister of foreign affairs: 'In compliance with your excellency's request I did not fail to transmit to my government immediately upon its receipt your note of May 28, in reply to my note of May 15, and your supplementary note of June 1, setting forth the conclusions, as far as reached by the imperial German government, concerning the attacks on the American steamers Cushing and Gulllight. I am now instructed by my government to communicate the following reply: 'The government of the United States notes with gratification the full recognition by the imperial German government, in discussing the causes of the Cushing and the Gulllight, of the principle of the open sea to neutral ships, and the frank willingness of the imperial German government to acknowledge and meet its liability where the fact of attack upon neutral ships, which have not been guilty of any hostile act by German aircraft or vessels of war, is satisfactorily established, and the government of the United States, in due course, lay before the imperial German government, as it requests, full information regarding the attack on the steamer Cushing.'"

"The FALABA CASE. 'With regard to the sinking of the steamer Falaba, by which an American citizen lost his life, the government of the United States is surprised to find the imperial German government contending that an effort on the part of a merchantman to escape capture and secure assistance alters the obligation of the official seeking to capture the vessel in respect of the safety of the lives of those on board the merchantman, although the vessel has ceased her attempt to escape when torpedoed. There are other circumstances. They have been in the minds of statesmen and of international jurists throughout the development of naval warfare, and the government of the United States does not understand that they have even been held to alter the principles of humanity upon which it has assisted. Nothing but actual forcible resistance, or continued efforts to escape by flight, when ordered to stop for the purpose of visit on the part of the merchantman has ever been held to forfeit the lives of her passengers or crew. The government of the United States, however, is seeking in this case to relieve itself of liability, but only intends to set forth the circumstances which led the commander of the submarine to allow himself to be hurried into the course which he took.

GERMAN FALSEHOODS NAILED. 'Your excellency's note, in discussing the loss of American lives resulting from the sinking of the steamship Lusitania, adverts at some length to certain information which the imperial German government has received with regard to the character and outfit of the vessel, and your excellency expresses the belief that this information may not have been brought to the attention of the United States. It is stated that the Lusitania was undoubtedly equipped with armed guns, supplied with trained gunners and special ammunition, transporting troops from Canada, carrying a cargo not permitted under the laws of the United States to a vessel also carrying passengers, and serving, in virtual effect, as an auxiliary to the naval forces of Great Britain. Fortunately these matters concerning which the government of the United States is in a position to give the imperial German government official information. Of the facts alleged in your excellency's note, if true, the government of the United States would have been bound to take official cognizance of them, and to have taken steps to perform its recognized duty as a neutral power, and in enforcing its national laws. It was its duty to see to it that the Lusitania was not armed for offensive action; that she was not serving as a transport, that she did not carry a cargo prohibited by the statutes of the United States, and that, in fact she was a naval vessel of Great Britain. She should not receive clearance as a merchantman; and it performed that duty and enforced its statutes with scrupulous vigilance through its regularly constituted officials.

ABLE TO GIVE ASSURANCE. 'It is able, therefore, to assure the imperial German government that it has been misinformed. If the imperial German government should deem itself to be in possession of convincing evidence that the officials of the government of the United States did not perform these duties with thoroughness the government of the United States sincerely hopes that it will submit that evidence for consideration."

"Whatever may be the contentions of the imperial German government regarding the carriage of contraband of war on board the Lusitania, or regarding the explosion of that material by the torpedo, it need only be said that in view of this government these views are irrelevant to the reconsideration of the imperial German government's position in respect of the principles of international law which throw into the background any special circumstances of detail that may be thought to affect the case;

RIGHTS OF HUMANITY. 'The government of the United States is contending for something much greater than mere rights of property or privilege of commerce. It is contending for nothing less high and sacred than the rights of humanity, which every government honors itself in respecting and which no government is justified in resigning on behalf of those under its care and authority. Only their actual resistance to capture or refusal to stop when ordered to do so for the purpose of visit, could have afforded the commander of the submarine any justification for the capture and the lives of those on board the ship in jeopardy. This principle, the government of the United States understands, is the principle which the imperial German government has recognized and embodied in its naval instructions, and upon this principle that the United States must stand.

OFFERS GOOD OFFICES. 'The government of the United States is happy to observe that your excellency's note closes with the intimation that the imperial German government is willing now, as before, to accept the good offices of humanity, and to accept the assistance of the United States in coming to an understanding with the government of Great Britain by which the character and conditions of war on the sea may be changed. The government of the United States would consider it a privilege thus to serve its friends and the world. It stands ready at any time to convey to either government any intimation or suggestion the other may be willing to have it convey, and cordially invites the imperial German government to make use of its services in this way at its convenience. The whole world is concerned in anything that may bring about even a partial accommodation of interests, or in any way mitigate the terrors of the present distressing conflict.

JUSTICE AND HUMANITY. 'In the meantime, whatever arrangements may happily be made between the parties to the war, and whatever may, in the opinion of the imperial German government, have been the prevention of the circumstances of the past, the government of the United States confidently looks to the belief and humanity of the government of Germany vindicated in all cases where Americans have been wronged or their rights as neutrals invaded.

"The government of the United States very earnestly and very solemnly renews the representations of its late official cognizance to the imperial German government on the 15th of May, and relies in these representations upon the principles of humanity, the universal recognized and the ancient friendship with the German nation.

ASKS FOR GUARANTEE. 'The government of the United States cannot admit that the proclamation of a war zone from which neutral ships have been warned to keep away may be made to operate, in an abbreviated manner, to the rights of either of American ship masters or of American citizens bound on lawful errands as passengers on merchant ships of belligerent nationality. It does not understand the imperial German government to question these rights. It understands it also to accept as established beyond question the principle that the lives of non-combatants cannot lawfully or rightfully be put in jeopardy by capture or destruction of an unresisting merchantman, and to recognize the obligation to make sufficient provision to ascertain whether a suspected merchantman is in fact of belligerent nationality, or is in fact carrying contraband of war under a neutral flag. The government of the United States deems it reasonable to expect that the imperial German government will adopt the measures necessary to put these principles into practice in respect of the safeguarding of American lives and American ships, and to give assurances that this will be done.

"ROBERT LANSING, 'Secretary of State, Ad Interim."

Irrigation Proves Its Value

A striking example of the value of irrigation is found on the large estate of the Duke of Sutherland, at Brooks, Alberta. A field of alfalfa was sown on this estate three years ago, but as at that time the water system was not completed, the alfalfa had to be sown on dry ground, and failed to yield sufficient growth to be worth cutting. It, however, apparently remained alive in the soil, for this year it is up strong and healthy, after having been well irrigated. It now averages over one foot in height and will be ready for cutting about June 10. This is the first year water has been available for irrigation in this part of the Eastern Section of the Irrigation Block, and farmers are jubilant over the extra-beneficial fertility of the soil revealed when ample water is available. On the Duke of Sutherland's irrigated farm, 3,500 acres of crop promise a bumper harvest. Of this, 3,000 acres are devoted to Marquis and Red Fife wheat, which shows an excellent stand. There is also a fine field of irrigated timothy and hay, oats and flax, all indicating good yields. During the present summer 200 acres on this farm will be devoted to alfalfa, and the rest, storing sufficient moisture for bringing the crops up early next spring.

A SOLDIER'S CAMEL RIDE

An Australian soldier in Cairo wrote the following description of a ride on a camel, "Before a camel gets down it makes a noise like a sitz bath being dragged along Oxford road at the rate of about four miles an hour. Then it folds its legs under it like a four-foot two-foot rule, and then you start. It's your turn now. You get on its back and its legs unbend, and you clutch and think of all the bad deeds you have ever done, and then open your eyes expecting to find the Pyramids far beneath you. The motion when it starts is that of riding astride the banner in a Good Templars procession, and when the beggar runs it's like being astride the banner in a Bad Templars procession.

"It's when a camel gets down that one really begins to see life. Have you ever trodden on a loose stair rod? That is the second sensation. The first is like one you get when you come across the top stair from above in the dark, when you don't know it's there, and the last makes you remember the day the hammock rope broke."

Comparison of Bullets.

KAISER FEARS DEATH

If He Catches Cold He Goes to Bed Immediately.

Whilst traveling in the rear of his troops the Kaiser has in constant attendance a number of court physicians. He fears the attack of disease almost as much as he dreads the assassin's knife. If Wilhelm catches as much as a cold he immediately retires to bed and cancels all his engagements. Unhappy court officials who suffer from chills have to carefully hide their symptoms from the Kaiser, otherwise they will be at once banished. They have to use handkerchiefs behind the back of a friendly palm or slip through a window to a terrace, where they can sneeze out of the range of his Majesty's observance.

In Berlin the Kaiser used to exercise in a covered tennis court, which was frightfully overheated, according to Wilhelm's orders. In this oppressive atmosphere he played tennis with perspiring officers. Rather than run the risk of developing a chill the Kaiser would disport himself in this building with its hot-house interior. It was the same with his riding school. The Master of the Horse was always finding his charges developing coughs owing to the heated atmosphere in which they were exercised by the Kaiser.

Miss Anne Topham, at one time governess to the Kaiser's daughter, tells in her "Memories of the Kaiser's court" how the Emperor was always making pan-stricken exits from one palace to another to avoid disease. On one occasion the Emperor and his court were comfortably installed at the Belle Vue Palace, when Prince Oscar developed chickenpox. Since all the luggage was packed and a few hours later the Kaiser was scurrying off to another palace. This occurrence happened just prior to the German Emperor's visit to England, so that he spent an apprehensive week in the latter country, always on the alert for symptoms of the disease which he feared had infected him.

Onions For Scorch Marks

For scorch marks try the following: From four peeled onions extract the juice, mix this with three ounces of fuller's earth, one ounce of soap and a pint of vinegar. Boil well together; when nearly cold put on the scorched places and let dry in the air. Wash in cold water.

Scottish Radium Plant

Dalratt, on Loch Lomondale, is the home of a new industry in Scotland. An old sawmill has been adapted for use as a factory for the extraction of radium and other rare metals from their ores.

The promoter of the scheme is Mr. John S. MacArthur, a Scottish metallurgical chemist, whose attention was directed to the problem of radium extraction about two years ago, when he began to make industrial experiments, working with ores from which the uranium and vanadium had already been extracted. He was soon successful, and before long had established a small factory at Huncore. Though Huncore was perfectly suitable for most of the earlier processes necessary, and it was this which influenced him in his decision to transfer his factory to Loch Lomond.

Mr. MacArthur has placed upon the market about 1,500 milligrammes of radium, and expects to be able to extract about five or six grammes a year.

Good Form

The girl who is popular is she who makes a study of the things that are better left unsaid. One need not be aggressive in speech to be a social failure.

Oh, those things that mean no actual harm, yet make us awkward! Sometimes thoughtlessness is at fault, again a too hasty tongue, more often lack of the feeling.

There is nothing, for instance, in announcing to a guest the number of a certain luncheon or dinner, yet, when that announcement makes another woman realize she is a fill up, far better would it be to say nothing about it. You may think it shows how popular is your guest to remark the number of things that are being given in her honor. Tell of this entertaining to a friend who feels she should do likewise, but is prevented by poverty. It is one of the things far better left unsaid.

If you are the hostess who has achieved at much trouble two tables of bridge or a simple family dinner for a friend's house guest, don't you feel when that friend announces that she was compelled to turn down an elaborate luncheon for your invitation that the information might with better taste have been suppressed?

Better unsaid is the gloomy greeting to an imaginative friend: "How pale you look! Have you been sick?" To the average fat woman far better unsaid are discussions on flesh, dumplings, big hips and double chins. The hundredth woman may not be so negative, but the abjectly-secrecy recent being asked, "How much do you weigh now?" or "Rent's you stout or than the last time we met?"

The Notes to Write.

A girl need not be a brilliant writer to send out pleasing wedding notes. What is needed is sincere gratitude, gracefully but not gushingly expressed. Overpraise is almost as annoying as indifference.

Never be guilty of a set form; your friends are sure to compare notes and laugh over ready letter writer effects. Aim to give the individual touch, to introduce the few words that make the sender realize that she is really being thanked, not a job lot of givers.

It is customary to include your thanks in thanking for a wedding present. Though the gift comes to the girl, it is actually, for both and should be so acknowledged.

It is also the custom to tell your friends you will be glad to have them come in and see your presents. This is particularly necessary when there is to be no reception and you are to live out of town. Set hours may be mentioned if you do not wish to be bothered with a run of visitors.

Many brides write notes to their own friends and work a substitute for the friends of their friends. This is a great mistake, since strangers have often no other way to judge the bride than by her note of thanks.

The Chaperon Question.

Is the chaperon growing less necessary? Is it always necessary for a party of young people to have a chaperon? Is it always necessary for a young man to have a chaperon? The good fellowship which prevails among young men and young women at the present time has lessened the importance of the chaperon. At all times a chaperon is considered best form, and no matter how well a party of young people may know one another the presence of a chaperon gives dignity to whatever good time they may have on hand and also safety in case of unforeseen disaster, as an older woman presumably has her wit about her in an emergency and can decide what is best to be done. Well bred girls and men would not for an instant think of going out on any expedition unless a chaperon accompanied them.

On Good Breeding.

A great part of our education is sympathetic and social. Boys and girls who have been brought up with well informed and superior people show in their manners an inimitable grace. Fuller says that "William, earl of Nassau," was a subject from the king of Spain every time he took off his hat.

You cannot have one well bred man without a whole society of such. They keep each other up to any high point. Especially women; it requires a great many cultivated women—alone of bright, elegant, reading women, accustomed to ease and refinement, to spectacles, pictures, sculpture, poetry and to elegant society—in order that you should have one Mme. de Stael—Emerson.

A Vacation Hint.

Young girls who lead unaccompanied by escort of any kind at an out of town resort, as it is sometimes necessary for business women to do, need to be careful of the acquaintances they make. If some perfectly unknown man is assiduous in his attentions the unprotected girl should make a point of sitting under the wing of some elderly woman guest at the same house until the man has proved his worth.

CREMATED THE DEAD

Thousands of Bodies of German Soldiers Burned in Blast Furnaces

A Catholic cleric writing from the trenches in North France mentioned the following incident regarding the German dead and the manner of their disposal: "In the towns of Lille and Namur in north France there are large blast furnaces for the smelting of iron ore, which is found in large quantities in this part of the country. The furnaces have long since ceased the work of smelting, and the dump yard used for bringing the iron ore have been emptied of their loads and put to a far different purpose. Every day two and some times three long trains of these dump cars are brought in loaded to the brims with German corpses and piled high at the mouth of the furnaces. A large gang of men are employed day and night placing the bodies four at one time in a sling and pushing them into the huge fires, where they are quickly incinerated. "Thousands have been disposed of in this way and the work still goes on."

A PUZZLING PINE.

Peculiar Tree That is Something of a Mystery to Botanists.

Upper California is the home of a tree that has puzzled botanists. It is a pine which will grow only near the seacoast. Its growth is slow, and it does not attain to great size.

The strange thing about it is that there are, to all appearance, two distinct species of pine in the way of the perpetuation of the species. Some specimens of it exist in Kew gardens, in London. They have been carefully examined by competent authorities, and all admit that the tree presents a problem unlike anything elsewhere met with.

This pine produces at regular intervals the usual cones containing seeds; but, strange to say, the cones are so thoroughly protected that the seeds cannot be released. The cones are hard and tightly closed and have strong overlapping scales.

More extraordinary still is the fact that the pine, after producing its almost invulnerable cones, keeps them hanging on its branches year after year. Unless through some peculiar accident the seeds would apparently remain attached to the parent tree forever. Many of the cones on the trees in Kew gardens have been there for years, as is shown by the size of the branches and the formation of the bark.

It has been found that the seed vessels which this tree so powerfully retains are so well protected that it requires a strong knife with the assistance of a heavy hammer to cut the cone into sections. No ordinary conditions of temperature can make a cone open.

The following is the only explanation yet offered that seems to have any degree of plausibility: The species may be perpetuated by fire. One who has studied the tree asserts that not long but the intense heat of a forest fire could compel the cones to release their seeds. It has been found that under the influence of intense heat they crack open and the seeds fall out uninjured.

TURKISH RED TAPE.

Getting the Kinks Out of a Custom House Tangle.

In the fast moving and restricted world of commerce it is not infrequently made to yield to influence with a latent force behind it, as instanced by this curious incident found in Captain A. B. Townshend's book, "A Military Consul in Turkey." A certain highly influential foreigner at Adrianople wanted a Christmas tree and ordered one from a dealer to come by train, but when the tree, an unpretentious little fir about ten feet high, arrived at Adrianople station some one discovered that it was illegal to receive "plants" from abroad.

"Thank! it is forbidden," said the custom house.

The foreigner said the contrary on duty. The foreigner said whatever was the equivalent to "rubbish" and demanded the tree.

There was a nice quandary for the authorities. Evidently it was a most fearful thing to receive a tree from abroad, and yet the consueque was one of getting rid of one into very serious trouble if he did not get his tree, and he said he must have it within forty-eight hours.

Some one at the custom house soared above the difficulty. The tree was sent on to Stambul on the Orient express, an eight hours' journey. It came back to Constantinople by the next train, and the person for whom it was intended received a notice that "a tree from Constantinople" had arrived for him and would at once be handed over to his messenger.

So the wretched little Bulgarian tree had become a Turkish one, brought from Constantinople, and the matter means it satisfied officialdom and served its purpose in the end.

Gladiators.

The gladiators were originally male factors who fought for their lives or captives who fought for freedom. They were first exhibited at the funeral ceremonies of the Romans, 253 B. C. and afterward at festivals about 215 B. C. When Diocletian was reduced by Trajan 1,000 gladiators fought at Rome for 12 days in celebration of his triumph. It is said that in the triumphs of Pompey the Great 10,000 fought through a series of many days. These combats were suppressed in the east by the Emperor Constantine about A. D. 325 and in the west by Theodoric in A. D. 500.

Her Protection.

"Why don't you marry, too?" he asked her, apropos of the marriage of her friend.

"I can't," she answered, "without committing bigamy. I haven't my divorce yet, you know. It's probably a good thing, a great protection. I might have married some good for nothing again if I had it. I am so unfortunate in my selections."

"True," he said, "you might have married me."

AFRAID SHE WAS DYING

Suffered Terribly Until She Took "Fruit-a-lives"

ST. JEAN DE MATHA, Jan. 27th, 1914. "After suffering for a long time with Dyspepsia, I have been cured by 'Fruit-a-lives'. I suffered so much that I would not dare eat for I was afraid of dying. Five years ago, I received samples of 'Fruit-a-lives'. I did not wish to try them for I had little confidence in them but, seeing my husband's anxiety, I decided to do so and at once I felt relief. Then I sent for three boxes and I kept improving until I was cured. While sick, I lost several pounds, but after taking 'Fruit-a-lives', I quickly regained what I had lost. Now I eat, sleep and digest well—in a word, I am completely cured, thanks to 'Fruit-a-lives'."

UNFINISHED BUSINESS. Alderman Coote and Johns, the committee on collection of arrears of taxes, reported as follows:

"That whereas the sum of $15,600 will have to be raised before the end of July to meet payments on debentures and current expenses, including school charges:

And whereas at the end of May $12,835 of 1914 taxes were still unpaid:

And whereas in the opinion of the committee it is imperative that a special effort be made to collect said arrears:

1. A notice be sent to each ratepayer in arrears of 1914 taxes that if same are not paid by August 1st, 1915, they will be put in solicitor's hands for further action.

2nd. Where ratepayers in arrears are willing to work out same, they be given precedence in city work.

3rd. Where ratepayers in arrears have claims against the city an adjustment should be made by contract account.

Moved by Alderman Coote, seconded by Alderman Johns, that report on committee on collection of arrears of taxes be received and adopted.

An amendment to the motion, that the report of the committee be received and placed in file be introduced by Alderman Botterill, seconded by Alderman Smith.

In support of the amendment Alderman Botterill stated that the methods of collection advocated in the report were not very drastic, considering the small amount of the arrears as compared to other cities.

Alderman Smith and Snell also advocated less severe methods of collection, while Alderman Coote, Johns and Watson spoke in favor of the original motion.

Mayor Carvell, while favoring some action towards the collection of arrears, favored laying the matter over until July 1st, and, on his vote, after an equal division among the Council, the amendment was passed.

A motion by Alderman Snell, seconded by Alderman Coote, that the Commissioners be instructed to have the dirt and gravel removed from the sidewalk, which had been washed down by the heavy recent rains, was carried.

On Alderman Coote's suggestion, the next regular Council meeting will be held on Wednesday evening instead of Thursday.

An offer from W. H. Hadley M. O. A. on T.M.S. Sharewater, of a plot from H.M.S. Kent, merited by a shell from the German cruiser Nürnberg in the recent Falkland Islands engagement, was gratefully accepted by the Council and their thanks and appreciation for the same conveyed to Mr. Hadley.

Council adjourned at 10.30.

LIQUOR VERSUS LABOR. 2. Alcohol closes the door of opportunity.

It is said that there are 2,000,000 positions in the United States not open to any but total abstainers.

It is a well known fact that many of our railroads have been abandoned by their employees to drink either on or off duty. In the business world, the tendency is to be deepened.

Marshall Field & Co. of Chicago, who claim to have the largest store in the world, will not permit any of their thousands of employees to drink either in public or private.

An inquiry conducted by the United States Department of Labor revealed the fact that 90 per cent. of railroads, 79 per cent. of manufacturers, 88 per cent. of the trades and 75 per cent. of agriculturists discriminate against employees addicted to the beverage use of intoxicants.

The great bulk of the employers in general and to the elevation of young men in business in particular is the drink habit.

3. Alcohol is responsible for unnatural competition.

When a workman spends his wages over the bar he compels his employer to go to other labor for work for wages to lay food for the children.

As a consequence her home is neglected, her health is often impaired, and the children are neglected and exposed to the evil influence of the street.

M. J. Murphy, Superintendent of Pittsburgh Street Railway Company, said in a letter to the "Sun-day School Times" that in seventeen years as manager of public utility corporations he has had occasion to promote many men from the ranks of conductor and motorman to be officers and in no case has a man using whiskey come up to the requirements.

5. The Labor Union against the saloon.

President Compters of the American Federation of Labor said: "Fifteen or twenty years ago the common belief was that the saloon would be the saloon of a room addition to the saloon; but we have changed all that. It was not good for the men, it was not good for the women. There was more likelihood of union talk and violent measures. It hurt the standing of the unions in the community. Hence that is practically closed."

John Mitchell, one of the best known labor leaders, is reported saying:

"The saloon is the labor union's mortal enemy, and unionism will never rise to its proper place, will never stand erect in pride and power, if it allows the liquor traffic to hang around its neck and strangle it back this cursed thing which men call the saloon."

"Labor uplifts; liquor keeps down, subdues the spirit, stands for brotherly help; saloonism stands for brotherly robbery. Unionism stands for self-protection; saloonism stands for self-destruction. The saloon is the enemy of the labor union."

In support of the amendment Alderman Botterill stated that the methods of collection advocated in the report were not very drastic, considering the small amount of the arrears as compared to other cities.

Alderman Smith and Snell also advocated less severe methods of collection, while Alderman Coote, Johns and Watson spoke in favor of the original motion.

Weeds and Weed Seeds

(Contributed.)

"In order to produce high-class clean seed, farmers must be constantly on the alert to keep the weeds on their farms in check and to prevent the introduction and spread of new varieties."

This commences Bulletin No. 58, recently published by the Seed Branch of the Dominion Department of Agriculture under the title of "Weeds and Weed Seeds," and which can be had free on addressing the Publishing Branch of the Department at Ottawa.

Telling of the wastage caused by weeds, the Bulletin proceeds to explain, rather the Seed Commissioner, Mr. G. H. Clark, does, how weeds are introduced and their extensive prevalence. They are classified according to the length of time they live, as annuals, biennials and perennials. In eradicating weeds it is of importance to know under which head they come. Biennials, it is explained, may be eradicated from land, however badly infested it may be, through any method by which the seed is destroyed before the young plants destroyed before they produce seed. Biennials, which require two seasons to complete their growth, must be either ploughed or cut down before they flower. Perennials are the most troublesome owing to the extension and firmness of their roots. A single ploughing often does more harm than good by breaking up the root-stocks and stimulating growth. For shallow ploughing, the roots are exposed to the sun to dry up. For deep-rooted perennials the tendency is to be deepened.

The Bulletin, after detailing results of the first pair of leaves has formed, on the seedling plant. For friable soils the use of the "weeder" is advised. The "tilting" harrow is also satisfactory for comparatively loose soils and is preferred as a weed destroyer on firm or clayey land.

Baseball

In a featureless contest, Friday evening, replete with misplays in almost every department, the Yankees for the second time this season, triumphed over the regulars by a score of 15-14. Percy Smith, home for a few days from the Sarcee Camp, burned them over for the Yankees, while Edgington hurried for the regulars. A badly split hand, sustained in the fourth frame of Friday's contest, will keep Bonnick, the regular first sacker, out of the game for some time. McKenzie, the speedy high school ball tosser, being his probable successor at the initial corner on the regular lineup.

Monday evening, in a five-inning city league fixture, through some weird leaving under the sacks by the losers, the Clerks chalked up a 6-3 victory over the High School athletes. A belated fifth inning rally with two down for a time threatened to tie things up, but a questionable decision at the plate after two had tallied retired the side.
